

1. British Accent, Hannah.

“Hello everyone in Brazil. Um, my name is Hannah and as you can probably guess I’m from England. I live in London. Well, at the moment, I’m currently living in São Paulo, but usually I live in London. I’m 22 years old. My mother tongue is English and I also speak two other languages, Spanish and Portuguese. But, I would really love to learn French, as well. I’m living in São Paulo, at the moment, and I’m loving it. I love Brazil and everything about Brazil.

2. Ghanian Accent, Samuel

Hello everyone. I’m Samuel, from Ghana, and uh, currently living in Brazil. Ghana is actually located in the Western part of Africa. I’ve been in Brazil for the past three years now. I’m an English teacher and musician, currently working on my album. I like cooking, travelling, doing music, that’s what I do almost every day. Thank you very much and I hope you enjoy studying English. Have a nice day! Bye.

3. Chris, Canadian Accent

Hey guys! My name is Chris. I’m from British Columbia, which is the most Western province of Canada. As you can probably tell, my accent is very similar to an American accent or to one that you might hear in a movie, but, I think Americans might notice sometimes some of my vowel sounds are different so I might have a Canadian accent. I grew up right on the American border with Washington State, three or four hours north of Seattle. In Canada, we also speak French, but my province is a very Anglophone area. So, I did learn some French in high school, but it was mostly for reading and writing. I know a little bit of Portuguese, but I’m not fluent in any foreign language, but one day I would love to be. Thank you very much.

4. Mouli, Indian Accent

Hi everyone in Brazil. I’m Mouli, I’m from India and English is my first language, but it is not my mother tongue. My mother tongue is Bangoli, apart from which, I also fluently speak, read and write in Hindi which is the most spoken language in India. Apart from that, right now, I have been living and studying in Germany for about a year and a half, and so now I can also read, write and speak in German tolerably well. I have never been to South America, but I really want to visit Peru and Brazil one day, and I hope you guys have a lot of fun learning about a lot of English accents all over the world, and good luck with your adventure! Bye!

5. Pamela, Tanzanian accent

Hello students from Brazil, my name is Pamela Massay, a Tanzanian lady. I was born in Kilimanjaro region, where there is the second largest mountain in the world. I'm currently living in Dar es Salaam, and my mother tongue is Kiswahili. I do also speak English and other vernaculars. My hobbies are swimming, travelling, reading novels and also playing netball. I'm currently working as a member of Parliament of the East African community. Asanteni, Karibuni Sana.

Note: Asanteni and Karibuni sana means: Thank you very much and welcome in my country (in Kiswahili which is the official language of Tanzania).

-Nicole, American accent:

Hello. How are you today? My name is Nicole Disante and I am from Tucson, Arizona in the United States. Tucson, Arizona is a city in the desert and it is very close from the border of Mexico. So, in that city we speak Spanish and English. It is a beautiful city with desert climate and mountains very closeby. We have cactus, coyotes and wolves, and it has some very good food. So, my hobbies are dancing, playing music, playing soccer, and learning Portuguese, Spanish and French. So, I hope you learn English and come to Arizona. Have a good day! Bye!
